From the Chair

2014 was the beginning of our 4th decade of Master Gardener community service and gardening pleasure. In addition to the many continuing aspects of the program, there were several very special events.

New Pins!

For Master Gardeners of long standing and high energy, the most important innovation of 2014 was the program's ability to calculate volunteer hours and reward volunteers with over 1000 life time hours. 164 Master Gardeners are eligible to receive a shining gold and jeweled pin in honor of their contributions (measured at the end of 2013).

John Stephens, with over 8000 hours, had the most volunteer hours measured. Future pins will be awarded to each Master Gardener on the completion of units of 1000 hours.

State Gardeners Here!

The high point of 2014 was the Missouri Master Gardener conference (Birds, Bats, Bees and Butterflies) hosted by the St. Louis Master Gardeners in conjunction with Master Gardener groups from St. Charles, Franklin, and Jefferson counties. The conference got rave reviews for everything from the workshops to the food at the Saturday night banquet. Getting to talk about plants and gardening for three days straight: Priceless!

More Trainees!

2014 was noted for the first ever concurrent training classes in St. Louis Master Gardening history. In addition to the now traditional afternoon class of aspiring gardeners, an evening session made Master Gardener training available to a wider range of busy students. A bumper crop of trained Master Gardeners was augmented by MG transfers and made for a record 58 graduating in December of 2014.

Supermen!

Last but not least, in 2014 we elected two Master Gardeners of the Year instead of the usual single awardee. After the Holiday Award ceremony, hard workers Mark Kalk and Chuck Brust took home engraved stones, a small token of esteem for many hours, weeks, and months contributing to the betterment of the Master Gardener program and the community at large. Kemper Center administrative whiz Phil Egart was made an Honorary Master Gardener.

Stephanie Sigala, February 2015

Birds, Bees, Bats and Butterflies

Missouri State Master Gardener Conference chair Mark Kalk worked with an organizing committee of 14 Master Gardeners for 18 months to create an enjoyable and well-run 3-day conference dedicated to Birds, Bats, Bees, and Butterflies: Our Partners in Gardening. Held at the Holiday Inn in Kirkwood, MO for 316 attendee gardeners, the conference was the successful effort of 125 Master Gardener volunteers.

On Friday, September 12, attendees sampled five special classes and toured the Donald Danforth Plant Science Center and Earth Dance Farms then enjoyed an end-of-day opening reception in the Missouri Botanical Garden's Monsanto Hall. Saturday's agenda of bus tours was capped by a delicious dinner, awards program and keynote speech Gardening the World's Plants - A Growing Conservation Challenge by MBG president Peter Wyse Jackson. Sunday's final day program consisted of 29 classes and workshops before gardeners returned home, heads filled with gardening inspiration.

The Ones Who Made It Happen

Conference Thank You:

From Beth Kleekamp: The Franklin County Master Gardeners greatly appreciate the $500 gift for participation in the Missouri State Master Gardeners Conference. We are pleased that we had a part in making the conference a success. On a personal note, I am glad I worked on the planning committee. I met so many wonderful garden friends.

Where We Volunteer

44,383
Total Volunteer
Hours in 2014

Master Gardeners have long term relationships with many gardening and beautification organizations in the Greater Metropolitan area. In addition, MG time, knowledge and muscle are contributed to short-term projects that make a difference to almost every community. St. Louis would be a different place without Master Gardeners! Total hours were up from 38, 071 in 2013 and 35,897 in 2012.

In 2014, Master Gardeners partnered with sixteen community gardening organizations who recruited volunteers at the annual volunteer fair. Gardeners also worked on myriad community beautification projects across the metro area.

Training Classes

Master Gardeners remember most of their 18-weeks of training fondly. In 2014, the program was expanded from the now-traditional Thursday 1:00-4:00 p.m. afternoon session to an additional Thursday 6:00-9:00 p.m. evening session. Students were tested weekly on lecture material and on assigned plant genera. Field trips and tours included the MBG greenhouses, Litzinger Road Ecology Center, and many of the picture-perfect MBG gardens. A record 58 students graduated from the program in December 2014, doubling the number of graduates five years ago in 2010.

Did you know that Master Gardeners originated as a question answering service called the Answer Men? Plant Doctors help the public in this photo.

Phil Egart, the rock of the Master Gardener Program

Many thanks to volunteer classroom assistants: Linda Anderson, Valerie Donahue, and Paula Miceli as well as Extension staffer Janie Lewis.

The Rock

And a round of applause to Phil Egart, Kemper Center whiz, for all he does for the Master Gardener Program. Phil was named Honorary Master Gardener at the 2014 Holiday Awards Program.

Continuing Education Classes for 2014

Gardeners are a curious bunch of people with a big wide world of interests. To keep up with new gardening information, the Master Gardener program offers a monthly Continuing Education topic (see below) which may include a lecture, tour or demonstration. Diane Grubbs is the Chair of the MGAC Continuing Education Team.

January 25	Plant Propagation Demonstration	South Co. Tech Greenhouse
January 28	Forest Ecology of Missouri	Michael Walsh, Forest ReLeaf
March 1	Bamboo Trellis Demonstration	Harold Tennyson, MG
April 22	Peak Bloom Walk (Ottoman Garden)	Sara Murphy, MBG Staff
May 3	Bamboo Trellis Demonstration	Harold Tennyson, MG
May 6	Historic and Important Trees of the Garden	Alan Stentz, MG
May 13	Peak Bloom Walk (Goldman Iris Garden)	Terry Milne, MG
June 26	Peak Bloom Walk (Jenkins Daylily Garden)	Chick Buehrig, MG
July 10	Rainscaping	Ned Siegel, MG
August 18	Sacred Seeds & Medicinal Plants	Wendy Applequist
Sept. 12-14	2014 Missouri Master Gardener Conference
October 23	“It’s Autumn” Workshop organized and hosted by Nathan Brandt
	Speakers:
	Mark Bowers	Acorns - They’re Not Just for Squirrels Anymore!
	Nathan Brandt	Get to Know Your Winter Annuals: ID & Control
	Steve Leu	Landscape Lighting with LEDs
November 17	Gardening in Urban Soils	James Wagner, Forest Park Forever
December	none

Speakers Bureau

Kudos to the MG speakers! They research and prepare their own talks in PowerPoint, book their own programs, generate the forms needed, create useful handouts, tote equipment, and stay in touch in advance as needed. Not to mention, deliver cogent, useful, and beautiful presentations!

The Speakers Bureau consists of 23 Master Gardeners who represent the Master Gardener program at multiples sites around the metropolitan area in the course of a year. 47 presentation topics are offered ranging from All about Orchids to Winter’s Natural Beauty. 106 presentations were given in 2014, up about 10% over last year’s efforts.

Special recognition goes to Speakers Bureau Coordinator Betsy Alexander. An excellent speaker on a variety of topics herself, Betsy is an invaluable source of expertise and enthusiasm for the program.

Picking the Perfect Plant

South Tech High School Greenhouse

The St. Louis Master Gardeners and South County Technical High School have a win-win situation. The projects and plants grown at the South Tech Greenhouse have sustained community gardens through the plants produced and the Master Gardener program via the revenue produced.

The greenhouse counted 43 regular volunteers who propagated approximately 20,000 plants for sale and donation. These included annuals, perennials, natives, aquatics, herbs, vegetables, and tropicals. The plant sale netted over $22,000 for the Master Gardener program while leftover plants were donated to 13 not-for-profit organizations in the greater Metro area.

Tillie's Corner remade

2014 Capstone Project:

Tillie's Corner

Mrs. Lillie V. "Granny" Pearson owned the neighborhood institution "Tillie's Grocery" for 50 years on Garrison Avenue in the historically Black Jeff-Vander-Lou area of St. Louis. After her death in 2006, her grand-daughter and her husband have spearheaded efforts to turn the site into a community resource. Master Gardeners adopted the site and landscaped it as part of their 2014 class Capstone Project.

2014 Community Service Awards

From Gateway Greening's

Michael Sorth: Thank you for being a member of the Gateway Greening family and supporting our work in the amount of $500. We appreciate that you understand the important role community gardens play in education, neighborhood building, and enhancing the livability of St. Louis. Your support helps us in our mission to empower and educate people to strengthen their communities through gardening and urban agriculture.

Working on Downtown Medians

The Covering House Donald Frisch

The Covering House is a place of refuge and restoration for girls who have experienced sexual trafficking or exploitation. Its garden space is used for many rehabilitation programs.

The Water Tower and Park Preservation Society Patricia Tailon-Miller

This organization aims to renovate Compton Hill Reservoir Park back to its original Victorian splendor.

Gateway Greening City Seeds Urban Farm Rachel Deffenbaugh

Providing fresh produce for local charities and the Bell Market, the staff and volunteers work alongside participants from the St. Patrick Center to provide opportunities for the homeless.

Tillie's Corner Miguel and Carla Pearson Alexander

The site of a former black-owned neighborhood grocery in the Jeff-Vander-Lou area is being transformed into a community garden and playground with the help of the 2014 Master Gardener Class.
